Chicago's Progressive Talk will be collecting food across Chicago and suburbs from December 1-11.

CHICAGO, IL, Monday, November 21, 2011 – This holiday season, WCPT, The Mike Nowak Show and Our Town with Mike Sanders are collaborating with Faith in Place, an interfaith environmental organization, to host a food drive to help feed the need in our communities, and educate the public on how it can be done in environmentally friendly way. Donations will be accepted at drop off locations around Chicagoland and Northwest Indiana from December 1-11.

“The concept of a sustainably rooted food drive is definitely something that’s out there, but we haven’t seen done locally before,” said Promotions Manager, Tiffany Wenrich, “the idea of giving back to the community with sustainability in mind is a perfect match for our Sunday morning broadcasts of Our Town and the Mike Nowak Show.” All non-perishable food donations will be accepted, but listeners are encouraged to donate items that are highly nutritional and sustainable. A list of suggested items is available at www.chicagosprogressivetalk.com, along with a link to locally grown items available at Faith in Place Winter Farmer’s markets.

There will be a special live broadcast of Our Town and the Mike Nowak Show on Sunday, December 4th from 8am - 11am for more on how to participate in the Holiday Harvest, organizations that serve the needy and sustainable food practices.
